MEMORANDUM FROM MR. JUSTICE BLACK

Re Nos. 5048, 5050, 5054, 5067, 5208, 5971, 6158, and 6374

[March 30, 1971]

Memorandum of MR. JUSTICE BLACK.

On March 2, 1971, this Court decided Boddie v. Connecticut, — U. S. —, holding that Connecticut could not consistently with the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses deny access to its divorce courts to indigents unable to pay relatively small filing and service of process fees.<sup>1</sup> We now have eight other cases pending on appeal or on petition for writ of certiorari in which indigents were denied access to civil courts because of their poverty. In light of the Boddie decision, I would grant the petitions or note jurisdiction in each of these cases and set them for argument or reverse them summarily.

One case, Sloatman v. Gibbons, No. 5067, is distinguishable from Boddie only by the fact that Arizona permits an extension of time for an indigent to pay the statutory fee when filing for a divorce. In re Garland, No. 5971, involves the right of a bankrupt to file a <sup>1</sup> The author of this Memorandum dissented in Boddie v. Connecticut, — U. S. — (1970), but now believes that if the decision in that case is to continue to be the law, it cannot and should not be restricted to persons seeking a divorce. It is bound to be expanded to all civil cases. Persons seeking a divorce are no different from other members of society who must resort to the judicial process for resolution of their disputes. Special favors cannot and should not be accorded to divorce litigants consistent with the Equal Protection Clause of the Constitution.

MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS.

The facts of these cases are set out by MR. JUSTICE BLACK. All of them except Kaufman involve people who are denied access to the judicial process solely because of their indigency. Kaufman presents a distinctly different problem. There the State has commenced a civil suit to declare her an unfit mother and take five of her seven children away from her. The State is enforcing its view of proper public policy. That procedure has consequences for the citizen so great that it is hardly an extension to say the rationale of Douglas v. California, 372 U. S. 353, demands that she be provided counsel.

I believe a proper application of the Equal Protection Clause also requires that the access cases be reversed. Courts ought not be a private preserve for the affluent.
