MR. CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER delivered the opinion of the Court.

We granted certiorari in this case to determine whether the state's failure to keep a commitment concerning the sentence recommendation on a guilty plea required a new trial.

The facts are not in dispute. The State of New York indicted petitioner in 1969 on two felony counts, Promoting Gambling in the First Degree, and Possession of Gambling Records in the First Degree, N. Y. Penal Law §§ 225.10, 225.20. Petitioner first entered a plea of not guilty to both counts. After negotiations, the Assistant District Attorney in charge of the case agreed to permit petitioner to plead guilty to a lesser included offense, Possession of Gambling Records in the Second Degree, N. Y. Penal Law §225.15, conviction of which would carry a maximum prison sentence of one year. The prosecutor agreed to make no recommendation as to the sentence.

On June 16, 1969, petitioner accordingly withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty to the lesser charge. Petitioner

MEMORANDUM TO THE CONFERENCE:

I propose to substitute the enclosed for the two full paragraphs on page 6 of the above opinion -- those preceding the dispositive sentence.

This will give the state court an appropriate measure of choice and it may affect the partial dissents so far circulated.

Re: No. 70-98 - Santobello v. New York

We need not reach the question whether the sentencing Judge would or would not have been influenced had he known all the details of the negotiations for the plea. He stated that the prosecutor's recommendation did not influence him and we have no reason to doubt that. Nevertheless, we conclude that the interests of justice and appropriate recognition of the duties of the prosecution in relation to promises made in the negotiation of pleas of guilty will be best served by remanding the case to the state courts for further consideration. The ultimate relief to which petitioner is entitled is left to the discretion of the state court which is in a better position to decide whether the circumstances of this case require only that there be specific performance of the agreement on the plea, in which case petitioner should be resentenced before a different judge, or whether, in the view of the state court, the circumstances require granting the relief sought by petitioner, i. e., the opportunity to withdraw his plea of guilty. We emphasize that this is in no sense to question the fairness of the sentencing judge; the fault here rests on the prosecutor, not on the sentencing judge.

The case is remanded for reconsideration not inconsistent with this opinion.

MEMORANDUM TO THE CONFERENCE:

It seems desirable to add the following footnote to the penultimate sentence of the opinion as revised by yesterday's memo:

_/ If the state court decides to allow withdrawal of the plea, the petitioner will, of course, plead anew to the original charge on two felony counts.

This will make clear what the options are.

In your opinion in No. 70-98 - Santobello v. New York, would you mind changing the last two lines of your opinion to read that the petitioner be "given an opportunity to replead to the original charges in the indictment or to ask for specific performance of the plea bargain."

Before us, he asked for a chance to replead and go to trial. But there are many slips between cup and lip and he or his counsel may in the end want a choice. I see no reason why he should not be given the option, do you?

MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS.

I agree both with THE CHIEF JUSTICE and with MR. JUSTICE MARSHALL that New York did not keep its "plea bargain" with petitioner and that it is no excuse for the default merely because a member of the prosecutor's staff who was not a party to the "plea bargain" was in charge of the case when it came before the New York court. The staff of the prosecution is a unit and each member must be presumed to know the commitments made by any other member. If responsibility could be evaded that way, the prosecution would have designed another deceptive "contrivance," kin to those we condemned in Mooney v. Holohan, 294 U. S. 103, 112, and *Napue v. These "plea bargains" are important in the administration of justice both at the state¹ and at the federal²

MR. JUSTICE MARSHALL, dissenting.

I agree with much of the majority's opinion, but conclude that petitioner must be permitted to withdraw his guilty plea. This is the relief petitioner requested, and, on the facts set out by the majority, it is a form of relief to which he is entitled.

There is no need to belabor the fact that the Constitution guarantees to all criminal defendants the right to a trial by judge or jury, or, put another way, the "right not to plead guilty," United States v. Jackson, 390 U. S. 570, 581 (1968). This and other federal rights may be waived through a guilty plea, but such waivers are not lightly presumed and, in fact, are viewed with the "utmost solicitude." Boykin v. Alabama, 395 U. S. 238, 243 (1969). Given this, I believe that where the defendant presents a reason for vacating his plea and the government has not relied on the plea to its disadvantage, the plea may be vacated and the right to trial regained, at least where the motion to vacate is made prior to sentence and judgment. In other words, in such circumstances I would not deem the earlier plea to have irrevocably waived the defendant's federal constitutional right to a trial.

Here, petitioner never claimed any automatic right to withdraw a guilty plea before sentencing. Rather, he

Re: No. 70-98 - Santobello v. New York

Dear Chief:

The substitute material you propose for page 6 of your opinion certainly meets with my approval.

I have only one possible suggestion. In the fifth line from the bottom, after the words "to withdraw his plea of guilty" would it be advisable to add something like "and to plead again to the two felonies charged by the indictment"? I suggest this only because I would not want any misunderstanding, or later claim, that Santobello's choice now is only between pleading guilty or not guilty to the lesser misdemeanor offense. Perhaps all this is clear enough, but I am not so sure.

Sincerely,

HAB
