National Labor Relations Board, Petitioner,
v.
The Magnavox Company
of Tennessee.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

[February —, 1974]

MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS delivered the opinion of the Court.

In 1954, International Union of Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers (IUE) became the collective-bargaining representative of respondent's employees. At that time respondent had a rule prohibiting employees from distributing literature on all of its property, including parking lots and other nonwork areas. The collective agreement authorized the company to issue rules for the "maintenance of orderly conditions on plant property," provided the rules were not "unfair" or "discriminatory." It also provided that bulletin boards would be available for the posting of union notices, subject to the company's right to reject "controversial" notices. All subsequent contracts contained similar provisions. Throughout the period since 1954 respondent has prohibited employees from distributing literature even in nonworking areas during nonworking time.

In due course IUE challenged the validity of the company's rule and requested that the rule be changed. The request was denied and the IUE filed charges against respondent for unfair labor practices in violation of § 8 (a) (1) of the Act, 29 U. S. C. § 158. The

Excluded:

[February —, 1974]

MR. JUSTICE STEWART, concurring in part and dissenting in part.

To the extent the Court holds that a union cannot contractually waive the right of disaffected employees to distribute in nonwork areas and during nonwork time literature advocating the displacement of the incumbent collective-bargaining representative, I am in complete agreement. This is the essence of the Board's decision in Gale Products, 142 N. L. R. B. 1246. But it seems to me wholly inconsistent with the letter and spirit of the National Labor Relations Act to relieve the union of its promise that its own self-serving literature will not be so distributed in the plant.

Although the union is deemed to represent all employees in the bargaining unit, both prounion and anti-union, and may waive important § 7 rights in the course of collective bargaining, presumably in return for management concessions on other fronts, this authority cannot extend to rights with respect to which the union and the individual employees have essentially conflicting interests. The Board stated the point succinctly in its decision in General Motors Corporation, 158 N. L. R. B. 1723, 1727:

"[T]he employees, by once selecting the union as their representative, do not forfeit their fundamental

But I suspect a word or two in the opinion that the issue is ~~the~~ distribution by employees to employees.
there is no frustration outside ~~the~~ coming on the property, although employees may be distributing for or against an outside union.
