MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS, dissenting.

It is odd that the Court which holds that a State may not bar an alien from the practice of law¹ or deny employment to aliens² can read a federal statute that prohibits discrimination in employment on account of "national origin" as to permit discrimination against aliens.

Alienage results from one condition only: being born outside the United States. Those born within the country are citizens from birth. It could not be more clear that Farah's policy of excluding aliens is de facto a policy of preferring those who were born in this country. Therefore the construction placed upon the "national origin" provision is inconsistent with the construction this Court has placed upon the same Act's protections for persons denied employment on account of race or sex.

In connection with racial discrimination we have said that the Act prohibits "practices, procedures or tests neutral on their face, and even neutral in terms of intent," if they create "artificial, arbitrary, and unnecessary barriers to employment when the barriers operate in-

MR. JUSTICE MARSHALL delivered the opinion of the Court.

This case involves interpretation of the phrase "national origin" in Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Petitioner Cecilia Espinoza is a lawfully admitted resident alien who was born in and remains a citizen of Mexico. She resides in San Antonio, Texas, with her husband, a United States citizen. In July, 1969, Mrs. Espinoza sought employment as a seamstress at the San Antonio division of respondent Farah Manufacturing Company. Her employment application was rejected on the basis of a long-standing company policy against the employment of aliens. After exhausting her administrative remedies with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission,¹ Mrs. Espinoza commenced this suit in the District Court alleging that respondent had discriminated against her because of her "national origin" in violation of § 703 of Title VII, 42 U. S. C. § 2000e-2 (a)(1). The District Court granted Mrs. Espinoza's motion for summary judgment, holding that a refusal to hire because of lack of citizenship constitutes

No. 72-671 Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co., Inc.

MR. JUSTICE POWELL, concurring.

Although I concur in the result and most of the Court's opinion, I am not in accord with what is said, in large part unnecessarily, about the guideline issued by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

See 29 CFR § 1606.1(d) (1972).

The Commission's guideline provides, in pertinent part:

"Because discrimination on the basis of citizenship has the effect of discrimination on the basis of national origin, a lawfully immigrated alien who is domiciled or residing in this country may not be discriminated against on the basis of his citizenship" 29 CFR § 1606.1(d) (1972).
