[June —, 1975]

MR. JUSTICE WHITE, concurring:

I concur in the judgment and in Parts II, III, and V of the opinion of the Court. I write only because of misgivings about the meaning of Part IV of the opinion. The Court appears to have held in Part IV of its opinion only that whatever protection the defense investigator's notes of his interviews with witnesses might otherwise have had, that protection would have been lost when the investigator testified about those interviews. With this I agree also. It seems to me more sensible, however, to decide what protection these notes had in the first place before reaching the "waiver" issue. Accordingly, and because I don't believe the work product doctrine of Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U. S. 495, can be extended wholesale from its historic role as limitation on the nonevidentiary material which may be the subject of pretrial discovery to an unprecedented role as a limitation on the trial judge's power to compel production of evidentiary matter at trial, I add the following.

I

Up until now the work-product doctrine of Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U. S. 495, has been exclusively a limitation on the ability of a party to obtain pretrial discovery. It has never been viewed as a "limitation on the trial

[June —, 1975]

MR. JUSTICE POWELL delivered the opinion of the Court.

In a criminal trial, defense counsel sought to impeach the credibility of key prosecution witnesses by testimony of a defense investigator regarding statements previously obtained from the witnesses by the investigator. The question presented here is whether in these circumstances the federal trial court may compel the defense to reveal the relevant portions of the investigator's report for the prosecution's use in cross-examining the investigator. The U. S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit concluded that it cannot. 510 F. 2d 146. We granted certiorari. 419 U. S. 1120 (1975), and now reverse.

Gentlemen:

I enclose page 13 of the opinion in the above case, with a rider attached that would revise somewhat the last two sentences in the full paragraph on that page.

This is prompted by a letter and memorandum which Byron has sent me. He would like to make clear that we are not indicating the scope of the work product doctrine at a criminal trial. As our decision in this case is based on waiver, Byron makes the point - correctly, I think - that it is unnecessary to go beyond that.

As Byron is away, I am not positive that this change will satisfy him although I think it will. He may file, in any event, a concurring opinion.

I would like to accommodate Byron to the extent of the rider attached to page 13, and will appreciate hearing from each of you.
