John has made some persuasive points which tempt me but I conclude we must proceed on the "fiction" that Congress generally must be presumed to know what it is doing. I doubt it did here but the "fiction" is essential to orderly operation of co-equal branches.

MR. JUSTICE BRENNAN delivered the opinion of the Court.

An Act of Congress providing for distribution of funds to certain Delaware Indians, pursuant to an award by the Indian Claims Commission to redress a breach by the United States of an 1854 treaty, is challenged in this action by a group of Delawares excluded from the distribution. The question presented by this case is whether their exclusion denies them equal protection of the laws in violation of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment.¹

MEMORANDUM TO THE CONFERENCE

Petition for rehearing in Delaware Tribal Business Comm. v. Weeks, No. 75-1301; Absentee Delaware Tribe of Oklahoma Business Comm. v. Weeks, No. 75-1335; Andrus v. Weeks, No. 75-1495.

In their petition for rehearing, appellees Weeks, et al., ask the Court, if it does not grant the petition, to word its mandate so that it will only be effective after a reasonable time unless Congress reconsiders the matter. If such reconsideration results in no revision of the Act, or no reconsideration is undertaken by Congress, the mandate that the judgment of the District Court be reversed will end the matter.

If Congress does reconsider the matter and revises the Act to include the Kansas Delawares, the questions will be mooted. Such an order would afford to Congress the opportunity to grant relief if there has been a legislative 'malfunction' and at the same time will not prejudice the rights of the Appellants. Pet., at 8-9.

This request undoubtedly stems from the Court's statement in Part IV of its opinion that Congress has the power to revise its original allocation since no distribution of money has yet taken place under the challenged Act. Slip op., at 16. I recall that in Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 142-143 (1976), we stayed the Court's judgment in order to give Congress an opportunity to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission or to adopt some other valid enforcement mechanism. I do not see that what we are now requested to do differs in principle from that action in Buckley.

I would not object to our denying the petition for rehearing, but staying the judgment for, say, 90 days to give appellees an opportunity to persuade Congress to revise the allocation scheme. See our Rule 59. But if it is to be done, I think it should have Conference approval.

MR. JUSTICE BLACKMUN, concurring.

I join Parts I and II of the Court's opinion, but otherwise I concur only in the result.

For me, the reversal of the District Court's judgment is not a result that is so inevitable and so easily and smoothly reached as a reading of Part III of the Court's opinion makes it appear. The Court's justifications for exclusion of the Kansas Delawares are not very persuasive. The first—favoritism toward tribal Indians—is undermined by the fact that Absentee Delawares who are not members of that tribe nevertheless are entitled to participate. Ante, 8 n. 14. The second—exclusion from a prior distribution—is troublesome because it is difficult for me to see how perceived prior unfair treatment buttresses further unfairness. And I won-

Re: 75-1301, 1335, 1495 - Delaware Tribal
Business Committee v. Weeks et al.

Dear Bill:

Your opinion identifies three possible justifications for a legislative decision to exclude the Kansas Delawares from the distribution of funds to the successors in interest of the persons injured by the breach of the 1854 Treaty. None of those justifications raises any question about appellees' status as successors of members of the injured class; nor do you question the fact that the exclusion is the consequence of a malfunctioning of the legislative process rather than deliberate choice by Congress.

The appellees are members of the class whose claim has been determined to be valid by the Indian Claims Commission. There is nothing in the proceeding before the Claims Commission, or in the legislative history of the statute, to support the conclusion that anyone advocated, or Congress intended, to award compensation for less than all members of the class. At the end of the legislative process Congress adopted an amendment to the bill in order to be sure that the Munsees--who are not members of the class--would not participate in the award. Unfortunately, the amendment had the unintended consequence of also excluding the appellees.

In view of the fact that payment of the appropriated funds to the appellants will represent a distribution of the entire amount of the award, I do not see how the Court can be sanguine about the possibility suggested in Part IV of your opinion, of a legislative solution which will correct what I regard as a manifest injustice.

In any event, I still plan to prepare a dissenting opinion which will set forth the substance of the foregoing together with a discussion of the reasons why I am persuaded that each of the three hypothetical justifications for this discriminatory action is insufficient to save its constitutionality.

Respectfully,

MR. JUSTICE STEVENS, dissenting,

At the outset of these proceedings the Indian Claims Commission noted that in accordance with the Indian Claims Commission Act any recovery for a breach of the Treaties of 1829 and 1854 "must be for the benefit of all the descendants of the Delaware Nation as constituted in 1829 and 1854," Delaware Tribe of Indians v. United States, 2 Ind. Cl. Comm. 253, 270-271 (1952).¹ In due course the Commission found

¹ Aff'd as to parties, 128 F. Supp. 391 (Ct. Cl. 1953). The Commission relied on a contemporaneous holding of the Court of Claims to the same effect, McGhee v. Creek Nation, 122 Ct. Cl. 380, 388, 392, 396 (1952), cert. denied, 344 U. S. 856. That court, charged by statute with interpreting the Indian Claims Commission Act and reviewing the actions of the Commission, 25 U. S.
