SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 78-1651

Seatrain Shipbuilding Corporation et al., Petitioners, v. Shell Oil Company et al.	} On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Dis- trict of Columbia Cir- cuit.
---	---

[February —, 1980]

MR. JUSTICE BRENNAN delivered the opinion of the Court.

In 1972 petitioner Seatrain Shipbuilding Corporation (Seatrain) received a construction-differential subsidy (CDS) of $27.2 million pursuant to Title V of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, 46 U. S. C. § 1151 et seq., to construct the 225,000-deadweight-ton supertanker Stuyvesant. As required by Section 506 of the Act, 46 U. S. C. § 1156, Seatrain and its affiliate, petitioner Polk Tanker Corporation, the initial owner of the Stuyvesant, agreed to operate the supertanker exclusively in the foreign trade except as otherwise authorized in that section. By the time the vessel was completed in 1977, however, petitioners wanted to operate it in the domestic trade. Accordingly, they asked the Secretary of Commerce permanently to lift all restrictions on the Stuyvesant's operation in domestic commerce in exchange for their fully secured, 20-year interest bearing note repaying in full the vessel's CDS. The Secretary granted the application, accepted the promissory note, and deleted the applicable restrictions from the CDS contract. The primary question for decision is whether the Secretary of Commerce may terminate the restrictions imposed pursuant to § 506 when the owners of a vessel constructed with a CDS repay that subsidy in full. The District Court for the District of Columbia concluded that the Secretary had such

RE: No. 78-1651 - Seatrain Shipbuilding Corporation
v. Shell Oil Company

Dear Byron:

Thank you for your join in this case. I will change the word "domestic" in the phrase to which you refer on page 16 to "unsubsidized." This will eliminate any misleading implication. Although I doubt as a practical matter that the owner of a vessel which has repaid its subsidy would ever engage in foreign trade (unless he enjoys losing money), you are certainly right that the law would not forbid him from doing so.

Thanks for catching it.

Sincerely,

Mr. Justice White

Re: 78-1651 - Seatrain Shipbuilding Corp. v. Shell Oil Co.

Dear Bill:

At our Conference discussion of this case, I expressed considerable doubt as to the question of appellate jurisdiction. While this doubt lingers, I think you have dealt admirably with the issue in Part II of your proposed opinion of the Court. Accordingly, since I agree with your convincing disposition of the merits of the case, I shall join your opinion unless somebody else writes in dissent on the issue of appellate jurisdiction.

Sincerely yours,

P.S.

Dear Bill:

I was the second of your colleagues, in addition to Potter, who expressed doubt as to the question of appellate jurisdiction in this case. Like Potter, I think the question is a close call, but I think you have treated it well and consistently with prior precedents. I therefore join.

Sincerely,
